An Invitation for Suggestions.

This procedure enables Great Britain and her allies to take cognizance of the virtual invitation of the United States to the belligerents to make fare, and it is suggested that out of it may grow a modus vivendi or temporary arrangement whereby the rights of neutrals or beligerents would not be given undring the progress of the war, but changes affected so as to mitigate herrors of the conflict and afford safety to non-combatants and neutrals on the high seas.

The resignation of Mr. Bryan because he revealed to hostilities is a fator which high officials here regard as likely to have an important influence on the situation in Berlin, because he revealed in advance that President Wilson would not surrender the right of Americans to travel on unarmed and unresisting merchant ships of any nationality.

Inasmuch as Mr. Bryan interpreted the note which was presented by Ambassador Gerard as likely to lead to war, nuch more strength of purpose, it was admitted in official quarters, would be attached to the note on its receipt in Berlin by the ministry, while German public opinion would not in the text itself any provocation for a rupture in relations.

The statement was made by Ensign Richard R. Adams, honor man of this year's graduating class. It was brought out when Adams was cross-examined concerning a meeting of the class presidents with the superintendent, when, Adams said, Admiral Fullam gave expression to the statement he attributed to him, with the further remark that he, at least, would rather be sent to sea in command of a collier ship than stay at Annapolis.

Questioned About Resolutions.

Adams was questioned about the res utions said to have been adopted by the first class men in behalf of Ralph McK. Nelson, a "star" man, after he had bee recommended for dismissal. It was held against Nelson that he had seen alleged fraudulent papers and had failed to re-port them and that he had helped certain fourth class men to make use of the Adams said a meeting of the class had been called to arrange for the german, when Nelson presented the resolutions and requested the members to sign them. When Adams saw that one clause said that whoever signed would be guilty in the same degree he withheld his signature until he could read the findings of the board of investigation.

"We expect to convince you by what is contained in the records," he said, "that Frank is innocent. We only ask you to change the penalty passed in this case to the alternative penalty provided by the law. The difference between what our petition asks and the judgment as it stands is the difference between life and death.

"I shall show by the record that Frank iogleally could not have had part in Mary Phagan's murder. I shall also undertake to show that the negro, James Conley, first robbed, then assaulted and finally murdered the girl." In reply to a question by Gov. Slaton Mr. Howard said he was willing to accept the testimony of the state chemist, Dr. R. Harris, and other state witnesses as to the violence committed against the Phagan girl prior to her murder. The attorney argued at length on this testimony.
